

Dear Birthparent,

We would like to start out by just saying, "Thank you." We do not know you or the story that has brought you to adoption, but thank you for helping to make a family whole. We cannot imagine the selflessness that you have in your heart to choose adoption for the sweet life you are carrying, and we are continually praying for you each and every day.

We are Ben and Kelsey, proud parents of our five-year-old son Benson and our two-year-old daughter Collins. They are the light of our life, and we can't wait to have another child to love. Benson is the best big brother and is so excited to have another baby. He absolutely adores his sister and would do anything in the world for her. We are excited for Collins to become a big sister and get to play the same role Benson has for the past two years.

We live in a small town surrounded by family and friends who love us and our kids and are looking forward to showering another family member with that same love and affection. We live close enough to both sides of our family that our kids see their Grammy, Papa, and Pop regularly. We are both extremely close to our families and hope to one day share that love with another child.

We met and fell in love almost instantly. We were engaged and married within one year of meeting each other. One year after our wedding we were blessed beyond measure with Benson and again three years after that with Collins. They both help make what was already a great life an even better one.

I, Kelsey, work at a bank with very flexible hours so that I can attend any and everything for both kids. I have never missed a class party, play or a sports game. There are not enough words to describe how wonderful Ben is. He is funny, caring, and sweet, but most of all he is the most amazing father our children could have been blessed with. He is the first to roll around with them on the ground or take them to the park. Benson has not played a sport that Ben hasn't coached. Coming home to Ben, Benson, and Collins is by far my favorite part of every single day.

I, Ben, am an engineer and also have a flexible work schedule. I enjoy running and most outdoor activities. I also really enjoy cooking out on the grill. I am also very involved in both kid's extracurricular activities. Kelsey is an amazing mother and wife. She is not only strong in her faith, but also strong in her family values and beliefs. She keeps Christ in the center of her focus, and would do anything for a complete stranger to turn their day around.

Thank you for taking the time to read our letter. We will continue to pray that God surrounds you with his love and you have peace knowing that whatever family you choose your baby will be safe and loved unconditionally.
